

Explore Your Type

- Introduction
- Strengths & Weaknesses
- Romantic Relationships
- Friendships
- Parenthood
- Career Paths
- Workplace Habits
- Conclusion

Premium Guides & Tests

How accurate is the introduction?

☆☆☆☆

Introduction

I change during the course of a day. I wake and I'm one person, and when I go to sleep I know for certain I'm somebody else.

BOB DYLAN

Adventurers are true artists – although not necessarily in the conventional sense. For this personality type, life itself is a canvas for self-expression. From what they wear to how they spend their free time, Adventurers act in ways that vividly reflect who they are as unique individuals.

And every Adventurer is certainly unique. Driven by curiosity and eager to try new things, people with this personality often have a fascinating array of passions and interests. With their exploratory spirits and their ability to find joy in everyday life, Adventurers can be among the most interesting people you'll ever meet. The only irony? Unassuming and humble, Adventurers tend to see themselves as “just doing their own thing,” so they may not even realize how remarkable they really are.

The Beauty of an Open Mind

Adventurers embrace a flexible, adaptable approach to life. Some personality types thrive on strict schedules and routines – but not Adventurers. Adventurers take each day as it comes, doing what feels right to them in the moment. And they make sure to leave plenty of room in their lives for the unexpected – with the result that many of their most cherished memories are of spontaneous, spur-of-the-moment outings and adventures, whether by themselves or with their loved ones.

This flexible mindset makes Adventurers remarkably tolerant and open-minded. These personalities genuinely love living in a world filled with all kinds of people – even people who disagree with them or choose radically different lifestyles. It's no surprise, then, that Adventurers are unusually open to changing their minds and rethinking their opinions. If any personality type believes in giving something (or someone) a second chance, it's Adventurers.

Adventurers want to live in a world where they – and everyone else – have the freedom to live as they see fit, without judgment.

That said, Adventurers' go-with-the-flow mentality can have its downsides. People with this personality type may struggle to set long-term plans – let alone stick with them. As a result, Adventurers tend to have a pretty cloudy view of their ability to achieve their goals, and they often worry about letting other people down. Adventurers may find that adding a little structure to their lives goes a long way toward helping them feel more capable and organized – without quashing their independent spirits.

Living in Harmony

In their relationships, Adventurers are warm, friendly, and caring, taking wholehearted enjoyment in the company of their nearest and dearest. But make no mistake: this is an Introverted personality type, meaning that Adventurers need dedicated alone time to recharge their energy after socializing with others. This alone time is what allows Adventurers to reestablish a sense of their own identity – in other words, to reconnect with who they truly are.

Unless they take time for themselves, Adventurers can end up feeling lost in the tide of everyday life, constantly reacting to external circumstances instead of making their own way.

Creative and free-spirited, Adventurers march to the beat of their own drum, and it would be easy to assume that they don't particularly worry what other people think of them. But this isn't the case – Adventurers are thoughtful and perceptive, able to pick up on people's unspoken feelings and opinions, and it can upset them if they don't feel liked, approved of, or appreciated. When faced with criticism, it can be a challenge for people with this personality type not to get caught up in the heat of the moment. If they encounter harsh or seemingly unfair criticism, they may even lose their tempers in spectacular fashion.

But there's good news, too: Adventurers live in the present, and they know that they don't need to dwell on past hurts or frustrations. Rather than focusing on how things could be different, people with this personality type have an incredible capacity for appreciating what's right about life just as it is. Everywhere they look, Adventurers can find sources of beauty and enjoyment that other people might miss – and this perspective is just one of the many gifts that they share with the world.

Strengths & Weaknesses

Adventurers You May Know

Lana Del Rey

Avril Lavigne

Jungkook (Jeon Jungkook)

Kevin Costner

100K SHARES

Add Comment

Shakeel • TURBULENT ADVENTURER (ISFP-T)

3 days ago

Very accurate

Reply Like (2)

Anonymous

4 days ago

Wow very interesting and yes very true

Reply Like (2)

Emo INFP (Lily) • TURBULENT MEDIATOR (INFP-T)

6 days ago

This is why I love isfps

Reply Like (8)

Hunter Sneddon • TURBULENT ADVENTURER (ISFP-T)

1 week ago

This thing read me like a book

Reply Like (9)

Anonymous

1 week ago

Woah this is accurate

Reply Like (3)

